FAKE OIL SCHEMES RAPIDLY MAKING GOLD BRICKS ONLY MEMORIES

As a means of getting rich quick the sale of worthless oil stock is supplanting the sale of gold and silver, and for smoothness the Wallingfords of the oil stock business are making their predecessors, the gold brick men and the fake mining promoters, appear crude and incompetent. Uncle Sam has put out of business more than one oil stock swindler for using the mails to defraud the public but many of them are too clever to violate the letter of the law. They sail as close to the wind of misstatement as they dare, publishing carefully worded advertisements which convey totally false impressions without actually making false statements. One of their favorite tricks is to lead people to believe that the property they are booming has been endorsed by the government oil experts. As might be imagined, the men who really make examinations of oil lands for the government are by no means pleased with this now familiar deception. Dr. George Odis Smith, director of the United States geological survey, said in a recent extended interview: "Nothing is doing the oil business more injury than widespread sales of worthless oil stock, and nowhere is there more need of blue sky laws to deal with such promotions. It is interesting to note that most of these fakers try to make it appear that the geological survey has endorsed their properties and predicted that oil will be obtained from them. As a matter of fact, the survey does not make reports on private holdings and its reports as to oil fields which it has examined are never given to promoters or to anyone else in advance of publication. If people who are solicited to buy oil stocks on the strength of alleged endorsement by the government would insist on seeing publications in which it is distinctly stated that oil may be found in the field that is being promoted, or would write to the survey at Washington, inquiring if there are such publications, the loss of their savings would be avoided. Past Masters in Fraudulent Advertising.

"The cleverness of some of these promoters is nothing short of marvelous. Recently a pamphlet has come to my attention advertising so-called oil properties near Moorcroft, Wyoming, and stating that the lands owned by this particular company are surrounded by a naval petroleum reserve. As a matter of fact, the government has never made and does not intend to make a naval reserve in this part of Wyoming. Certain lands in the vicinity were at one time temporarily withdrawn pending examination as to their oil character, but after geologists of the survey had examined them the entire area was classified as 'non-oil' in February.

"More recently a widespread advertising campaign has been carried on been successful oil development anywhere in the region examined and there is no mention in the monograph of oil in this vicinity. Except in the Boulder field, which lies 20 miles or more from this land, no successful oil well has yet been drilled in the region about Denver, and although the survey has made several later geologic examinations in the Denver Basin for one purpose or another, none of its geologists believe that valuable deposits of oil or gas are likely to be found in the vicinity of Denver. Certainly there is nothing to indicate an oil field east of Aurora on the lands covered by this company. Monograph 27 shows that this land is so situated geologically as to be unfavorable for oil accumulation and directly contradicts the geologic illustration published by the company, which shows the crest of an anticline containing an oil lake under the company's land. Although their advertisements would convey the impression that this geologic cross section was drawn by government geologists, when pursued by persistent inquiries the managing director of the company admits that 'the geological drawing which you refer to, showing a lake of oil predicted east of Denver, to the best of my knowledge, was not made by a government geologist.' In the same letter he says 'The only government geological report that we have had access to has been Monograph No. 27, United States geological report on the Denver Basin. Think of the nerve of such advertising on the strength of a report in which oil in this neighborhood is not even mentioned! Cornered, But Still Plausible.

"This company officer says further, regarding the statement that 'The United States geologists have made investigations and reported favorably.' This is not our own statement but is quoted in our letter as coming to us from other sources. We have not said anything in our correspondence that the government had made any investigations of our property, and we do not wish to give out this impression.' Well, maybe they do not wish to, but their statements could not well have conveyed that impression more distinctly without violating the postal laws.

"I suppose it is inevitable that such schemes as this should rob thousands, but my advice to all would-be investors is, when you are told that the government has endorsed an oil proposition write to the government and find out before you put up your money."

ARMY NOTES

[By Latest Mail]
SAN FRANCISCO.—Even to the telegrams which will be put on the wires from headquarters of the Western department, preparations have been made in advance for the movement of troops to the border should an order come from Washington to entrain the 1st Brigade, in northern barracks, and complete the present field force of the 3rd Division at El Paso. Equipment is ready to put aboard the cars, and railroads connecting with Vancouver Barracks, Seattle and Spokane have arranged to provide rolling stock for the movement of troops and transportation at a moment's notice. Troops now stationed in Washington and other northern posts of the Western Department, available for fighting, include the 14th, the 20th and the 21st Infantry. At Monterey there remain all but two troops of the 1st Cavalry. The former would take the field under Brigadier-general Ramsey D. Potts and the latter would report to Brigadier-general John J. Pershing.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Dispatches from the border stating that Brigadier-general Robert Wankowski of the state militia had deprecated the lack of co-operation between the militia and regulars guarding water supplies are scouted here by army officials. Reports received from officers in the field yesterday at department headquarters show the most friendly and amicable relations existing between the government and state troops. The coast artillery corps companies sent from San Francisco to the border and their positions, follow: At Calexico—Detachment of 61st Company; at Tecate, 66th Company and 24th Company with detachment; San Ysidro, 57th Company, 147th Company, 115th Company and detachment of 61st Company. With the exception of the last two, which are from Fort Rosecrans, San Diego, the troops come from posts about the bay.

Colonel Francis J. Kernan has been assigned to the 6th Infantry and has left the war college at Washington

Fort Shafter Notes

[Special Star-Bulletin Correspondent]
FORT SHAFTER, May 5.—The construction corps of the port under Captain Watkins is engaged in building a switchboard room to accommodate the big new switchboards that the remodeled telephone system will demand. The room is located on the east porch of the headquarters building and will be amply lighted with numerous windows. The switchboards have arrived at the post and Barracks, Washington, D. C., for El Paso to take command. The 6th is a portion of the 8th brigade which left San Francisco last week.

will be at once set up and wired in readiness for the completion of the remainder of the installation. The space on the opposite side of the building corresponding to the telephone office will be arranged in a similar manner to accommodate the regional printing office that hereafter has been in the open owing to the lack of an available room in the garrison for its housing.

The 2d has no line on the ability of the "wagon soldiers," but has met the 25th once before and won over them by playing an errorless game coupled with a real exhibition of how to hit the ball. News item—"Damaged Goods" is still running.
